

OKs Head for Europe

Five OK dinghies will leave Auckland tomorrow for the world championships in England in July, but their skippers will not head for Europe until June 1.

Last night the yachts and all their associated paraphernalia were loaded into a container, which will be shipped on the New Zealand Pacific.

Greg Wilcox, Joe Porebski and the Bamford brothers, Paul and Michael, will start their European campaign at Kiel week in Germany on June 6. Then they hope to compete in the Danish championships at the end of June.

National champion Leith Armit will join them in England for the British championships at Torquay on July 16, which will be followed by the world contest at the same venue from July 22.

Armit finished second in the 1978 world championships in Holland, while Wilcox is the only other skipper with European experience, having finished ninth in France two years ago.

About 80 competitors from 14 countries are expected to sail in the world series, which will be held over seven races.

The five New Zealanders have had to raise about $5000 each for the trip. The costs have been kept down as the New Zealand Yachting Federation arranged a good freight rate with the New Zealand Shipping Corporation for the yachts.

Greg Wilcox packing his OK into a container last night.

DOMINION

1st June 1983

SPORTS SHORTS

YACHTING: Five New Zealand yachtsmen leave today for the World OK dinghy championships in Torquay, England. Joe Porebski and Greg Wilcox of Wellington, Leith Armit of Auckland and brothers Paul and Michael Bamford of Lyttelton will participate in the event to be sailed July 22-30.

OK men tough on Wilcox

LONDON, Aug 14.—Tricky weather conditions and "team sailing" by the big Swedish contingent have made life difficult for New Zealand's Greg Wilcox in the world OK dinghy championships.

Now at the halfway stage, the championships, being sailed off Varberg on Sweden's southern tip, have been raced in difficult conditions with wildly varying winds and strong tides.

After four races, the Wellington helmsman goes into today's rest day in 30th place overall with 99 points and disappointing race placings of 18th, 31st, 32nd and 38th.

Wilcox has had trouble picking major wind shifts and has twice been left stranded on the wrong side of the fleet as the breeze has swung round.

In the first of the two races sailed yesterday he started late after an individual recall and although he slashed through the fleet to move up from 64th at the first mark to 32nd at the finish, he had left himself too much ground to make up.

In the second race yesterday he was buried in the start and was unable to fully recover from the error.

The Swedes, who have 18 boats in the championships, have been accused of using blocking tactics on the line and there have been several protests and disqualifications.

"It's been getting pretty rough out there," Greg's father, John Wilcox, told the NZPA from Varberg.

Meanwhile the world OK title — won last year by Auckland's Richard Dodson — looks almost certain to go to Denmark's Poul Kirketerp for the third time. After four races he has a 2nd and three firsts, leaving him with a perfect zero points tally with his worst race discarded.

He is followed by Stefan Jarrud (Sweden) on 14.4 points and West Germany's Peter Wreder on 20. points. — NZPA staff correspondent.

A WINNING combination — New Zealand OK champion Greg Wilcox on his way to victory in his boat Haloosinashun in the final race of the series yesterday.

Kiwi Leith rules OK

By RICHARD BECHT

AUCKLANDER Leith Armit has given New Zealand yachting's already golden yachting year yet another boost by clinching the world OK dinghy title in Torquay, England.

The 22-year-old Mairangi Bay yachting yesterday gave New Zealand its second major international triumph in a matter of only weeks.

Just recently, Aucklanders David Barnes and Hamish Wilcox reinforced New Zealand's international yachting reputation by again taking the world 470 title.

And now Armit has continued New Zealand's domination in the last decade of the world OK dinghy title hunt.

Five times in the last 10 years a Kiwi has taken the OK crown, the late Clive with Peter Lester, Richard Dodson (twice) and now Armit following.

LEITH ARMIT . . . continues New Zealand domination in world OK champs.

Armit promised so much when, as a 17-year-old, he became the world junior OK champion after finishing second in the 1978 world championships.

He rang his mother to tell her of the news yesterday but admitted he was in "quite a dazed state and not quite sure exactly what had happened".

Only six races were sailed in the series — the seventh was cancelled — with Armit's counting finishes being 1, 4, 7, 1 and 7.

Association secretary Bev Roberts, wife of the late Clive Roberts, said: "I think it's great that a New Zealander's won this again. The fact a New Zealander has won the world title five times in the last 10 years says something."

Armit now heads to Milwaukee for the Finn Gold Cup competition but he wasn't the only New Zealander to excel in the world OKs.

Right up there with the top finishers was Wellingtonian Greg Wilcox, the current interdominion champion, who finished